NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS

As we start the New Year 2020, we like to reflect on the year behind us and ask ourselves how we can improve our outreach and communications in the coming year.

In September, we introduced you to our new three pillars of storytelling:

- At the Intersection of Tradition and Innovation
- What's Your Isaiah Story?
- #beingisaian

Our aim is to always ensure that our Isaiah community has access to information about the programs we offer and the opportunity to participate in all our Temple activities, lectures, holiday events, and calls to action #beingisaian.

Here is how we delivered in 2019:

1. We moved to a once a week e-mail update for the entire community, giving you the freedom to choose what information you want to read from a single e-mail source.
2. The Isaian e-dition (our monthly newsletter) continued to highlight our volunteers, recap our Education and Engagement programs, and give you a listing of events happening during that issue's month.

As we move into this new year, we again find ourselves wanting to improve upon our outreach. With the printed Isaian newsletter, we plan to move from a bi-monthly to quarterly issue so that we can include more stories and pictures highlighting the life here at Isaiah.

We encourage you to use the many forms of communication we deliver to get your information. Here are other resources that are available 24/7.

WHAT'S ON OUR WEBSITE:

- Details of upcoming events
- A searchable calendar
- Photos, Music, Podcast, Sermons and Livestreaming and Video galleries
- Downloadable Newsletters
- Descriptions of Community Groups and Educational Programming

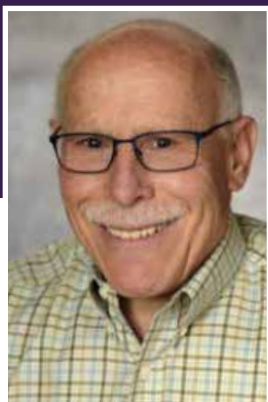

LIKE US ON FACEBOOK:

Facebook is a popular platform for communicating with our community. We post event updates, photos of our community activities, and information about what's happening with our clergy, staff, and congregants. We highly encourage you to 'Like' our Temple Isaiah Facebook page, which will allow you to follow us all year long.

ISAIAH - EAST ESCROW CLOSED

PRESIDENT'S NOTE

I am thrilled to let you know that escrow closed on Thursday, December 5 on 10313 W. Pico Blvd - AKA Isaiah-East which is now an official part of our campus.

This represents the culmination of almost 18 months of negotiations, fits and starts and most importantly the hard work of many of our fellow Isaiaans. Our Past President, David Leichenger, and the FY 2018-19 Board initiated the purchase process and I was fortunate to become President just in time to sign the initial purchase agreement. During the last six months, as we negotiated our bank loan with American Business Bank and went through the closing process, I was supported by the clergy led by Senior Rabbi Dara Frimmer, the current Board and many other lay leaders and congregants who gave their time and added their expertise to the closing process. Please see the Isaiah-East portal on our website for a list of the many individuals who contributed to this effort, as well as our plans for next steps to integrate the property into our campus. On behalf of all of us at Isaiah I want to say to all - Thanks so much!

The purchase of Isaiah-East opens a new era in the history of Temple Isaiah. It is a once in a lifetime opportunity to expand our facility and open new and exciting horizons for our congregation.

Our vision is to be your home at the intersection of tradition and innovation.

Isaiah-East is both a tangible and intangible manifestation of what this means. On a tangible level, the Isaiah-East property gives us the possibility to use the existing building for the short and medium-term needs that are being examined by the Vision/Use Working Group. In the longer term, the property allows us to think creatively about how to re-envision and possibly rebuild significant portions of our campus.

But equally important are the potential intangible benefits. Isaiah-East lets us build on the traditional Jewish value of community in new and innovative ways.

- How can this space help 21st century Jews gather in meaningful ways to rediscover Jewish history, define contemporary Jewish identity, and dream together about a more just and compassionate world?
- How can this space help us build new rooms in our Jewish home, rooted at the intersection of tradition and innovation?

Lead by the Vision/Use Working group, we will be seeking the ongoing input of the Congregation and keep you informed as we collectively create a vision for the Isaiah-East property and then turn that vision into reality.

I urge you from time to time to refer to the Isaiah-East portal on our website: templeisaiah.com/isaiah-east.

WHAT'S YOUR ISAIAH STORY?

by Rabbi Zoë Klein Miles

#JEWISHANDPROUD

Sam Seidel's Temple Isaiah story started in first grade when he was in Religious School. His grandparents offered to take him anywhere in the world as a gift for his Bar Mitzvah. Sam thought to himself that he would really like to see Israel. So in seventh grade, Sam set off with his grandparents on a transformative pilgrimage to Israel. Sam read Leon Uris' book Exodus while on the trip, and felt the stories come alive.

Sam is now in the middle of his freshman year at UCLA, and is a strong Zionist, proudly displaying an Israeli flag in his dorm. When his parents asked him about the flag, Sam told them,

"This is who I am. It's part of me. If people don't like it, I can deal with it, but I want them to know"

Sam is a competitive lacrosse player, and in the summer of 2018, he traveled to Israel for the world cup of lacrosse. There were 46 countries competing, and Sam met many of his lacrosse idols. In the summer of 2019, Sam played on the Under 20 lacrosse team in Prague, representing Israel. The team was half Israelis and half Americans.

"Before the Prague trip, I had had the Israel experience, but not the Israeli people experience," Sam said. In Prague, the athletes roomed and explored the city together, becoming fast friends. Sam was back in Israel again to work at the Women's Lacrosse Tournament, spending time with the friends he had made, and making new ones. His experience of the Israelis he met was all about sharing and generosity: "Everything theirs was mine, and everything mine theirs."

At UCLA, Sam is active in the Jewish community, including Hillel and the ZBT fraternity. When asked what advice he would give to Jewish students about to enter college, he shared, "People take being Jewish for granted. But there are endless opportunities. All you have to do is ask. You don't have to be religious, you just have to raise your hand." Some of those opportunities have included being part of Bearing Witness and talking with Holocaust survivors, going to Washington D.C., and making deep connections.

When asked about anti-Semitism, Sam said that he is concerned that we are seeing a blurring of lines between anti-Semitism and anti-Zionism. He said that sometimes when people are commenting on Israel, they feel they can also say something about Jews. He said that we have a responsibility to represent Jews and Judaism when we are in college and beyond, and it is important to have a voice.

"There is a lot of misinformation, and it is important to speak up."

Sam is grateful to Temple Isaiah for giving him the foundation of Judaism, and especially for being the place where he met his best friend in the world.

Sam has two younger siblings, Alex (16) and Ella (13) who are also creating their own Isaiah stories!

WHAT'S YOUR ISAIAH TEEN STORY?

TEEN TWINNING PROGRAM

Israel Trip - December 2019

This past December, 8th grade students from Temple Isaiah participated in The Global Teen Twinning Program sponsored by The Jewish Federation of Greater Los Angeles, spending their winter break in Israel learning and living amongst their Israeli peers.

As part of the program, an Israeli family hosted each student. The Israeli and American teens traveled throughout Tel-Aviv, Jerusalem, Masada, and of course, took the obligatory dip in the Dead Sea. In exchange, these seven students will host their new friends in Los Angeles this Spring allowing their Israeli counterparts to experience American Reform Judaism and Southern California.

Do you have a soon-to-be 8th grader? Talk to any member of our K-12 Team to learn more about this extraordinary opportunity to deepen Jewish identity, connection to Israel, and pride in Jewish Peoplehood.

AT THE INTERSECTION OF TRADITION AND INNOVATION

by Reuben Posner, Senior Director of K-12 Education and Engagement

The year was 70 CE. The army of the Roman Empire had laid siege to the city of Jerusalem and would soon destroy the Temple and scatter the Jewish People. Rabbi Yohanan, the Chief Rabbi, arranged for a clandestine meeting with Vespasian, one of the Roman Army's chief commanders, to broker a deal.

Rabbi Yohanan did not ask for the Temple to be spared, but rather he asked for people to be spared – he asked to move his community to the southern coastal city of Yavne. It is from this place of rebirth and reimagination, and from these people and their conversations, that the Judaism recognized today (a religion no longer based solely on space and sacrifice but rather based on community and prayer) first emerged.

In my first weeks at Temple Isaiah, I have thought back to this story in our collective narrative as I consider the relationship between tradition and innovation. I have found myself wondering – what does it look like to sit at the intersection of these two ideas? As a congregation and community, we have decided that that intersection is where we want to create a home. If that's the case, how might we prepare our children to stand at this intersection with us? What do we want them to know, feel, and understand as they join us in that space?

In an article entitled, The Virtues of Not Knowing, one of my teachers, Professor Eleanor Duckworth, provides one answer to the question of how we can prepare our children to find a home at this intersection. In the article Eleanor asserts that “knowing” an answer is not an active virtue because it “requires no decisions, carries no risks, and makes no demands.” She goes on to write that “The virtues involved in not knowing are the ones that really count in the long run. What you do about what you don't know is in the final analysis what determines what you will know.” Preparing children to be comfortable in nuance and not knowing is going to be an integral part of what we do.

Some additional answers to these questions can be found in the story of Rabbi Yohanan and the sages of Yavne. These rabbis were innovative – they created new methods and introduced new ideas – yet they were steeped in tradition. They felt empowered to make their own unique mark on Judaism, but their point of departure was ancient text and cherished practices. To their credit, they held tight to both ideas (tradition and innovation) and grappled with the complexity of building a home defined by both. Rabbi Yohanan's innovation was born out of a desire (if not need) to transmit the customs and beliefs of the Jewish people in new ways. How true this feels for us today.

And of course, these are just a few possible answers. As I continue to grow into my role as the new Senior Director of K-12 Education and Engagement, the aforementioned questions will serve as touchstones as we think about what is next.

Like Rabbi Yohanan, we are choosing both tradition and innovation in a time of external pressures and concerns for how Judaism will stay relevant for ourselves, our families, and future generations. I invite you to join me at the intersection as we learn to build a home together filled with curiosity, compassion, meaning and joy.
